to the 22d. On the 11th, the bark Benefactor, Davis, passed this port under a press of canvas. It affords a fine sight to witness a dipper under full sail, rushing past at the rate of at least 14 knots. A strong wind was blowing during the day, and the bark must have run from Coco Hend to Barber's Point, 20 miles, in less than two hours. We cannot expect elippers always to touch here in passing, but it is not too much to ask chipmasters, when they cannot stop, to drop a file of papers in a bucket or other container that will float, to be taken up by the boats which alway : go out to meet them. We commend Capt.

Davis' example to others. The political news received by these vessels is of the most stirring haracter, and will be found elsewhere in our paper. The commercial news is not important, and the only change noticeable in the fan Francisco market is a reduction in the quotation of leading articles. Flour is goted at $7 @ 28 50. THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser.

THURSDAY, MARCH 13.

THE news to which our readers have been treated, by the past three arrivals, has been laid before them before fifteen days had transpired since it was forwarded by the wires from New York and Washington. What would have been thought by our old residents, some of whom are still living, had it been prophesied to them twenty years ago, that in the year 1862 the current events transpiring in Washington would be printed and read in Honolulu fifteen days later. Great as this change is, the next twenty years will doubtless produce greater, and by some simpler and less expensive means than is now known, Honolulu will daily talk with London, New York, and Washington. For the present we are satisfied to receive our news with the speed it comes. A year ago, when the telegraph was being commenced, we predicted that the year 1862, would see us in receipt of news from Washington only ten days old, and we are now still firmer of that conviction, though fourteen days is the shortest time as yet.

Never during any former political commotion, as during the existence of the Southern rebellion. that given by us, notwithstanding the disayowal Napoleon's Campaigns has disturbed the commerce of the principal nations, and the prosperity of the whole world, as has this. Its influence is felt in the ware-houses and countingrooms of the largest importing merchants in every port of the globe. Every city in Europe feels its effects, as well as every Indian or Polynesian, who clothes himself in some form with the great Southern staple-corron. The whole world, in a greater or less degree, feels by its in America, and is consequently more deeply interested in its progress and termination than in any previous war that ever existed. It is this fact-a personal money interest-that creates such anxiety regarding it. And being thus deeply concerned in it financially, we believe that the whole world will rejoice at the prospect of the restoration of peace, the return of trade to its legitimate channels, and the reduction of prices to their former and just valuation.

Viewed in this light, the last news from America, of glorious victories of the Union army, is most welcome, foreshadowing the early return of peace. The secession of the State of Tennessee from the Southern Confederacy, and ber return again into the Union, will seal the doom of the rebellion. The report is brought by the telegraph that Gov. Harris of that State, has issued orders that all soldiers shall lay down their arms. This at first glance may seem improbable. But when we remember that late advices announced the Union men as having risen in Nashville, the capital of that State, to resist the rebel authorities, and that Gov. Harris had himself been compelled to flee to Memphis for safety, the report becomes more worthy of credence. Probably a majority of the people in the State are Union men, whose voice has been suppressed by the power of the rebels; and the Governor, to save his own neck as well as to save the city of Nashville from the effects of an attack and a probable destruction by fire, has given this order to lay down all arms. It goes to show that the Union sentiment is powerful in the heart of the slave territory.

The Union army has probably now got little or no fighting to do in this quarter. It has only to march on through the South, allow the Union sentiment again to speak out, capture the rebel leaders, take possession of all the forts and other government property, and take all arms and ammunition away from the rebels, and send them to Washington. We think the fighting is virtually ended, and that the Union army will move down to New Orleans without any formidyet in Virginia, or on the seaboard coast, but the probability is that the month of March will witness the army of the rebels entirely dispersed.

Well, what next? Aye, there's the question, what next? And it is certainly as important a question as was that how the rebellion should be put down. There will probably be a diversity of opinion regarding it. One thing, however, is certain, the slavery question, which has been the sole cause of the rebellion, must be settled now for all future time. It cannot be permitted to exist as an element to foment future rebellions, that respect. In its settlement, the South will This would indicate that the American Government refined community. have nothing to say. She must yield to and accept the verdict of the Federal Government, whatever that verdict may be. Like a criminal convicted of treason, she can expect no mercy, and can only accept what Whatever status the South may occupy after the rebellion is ended, her glory has in a measure departed. Should it turn out that the Union element is as strong throughout the Southern States as it is supposed and has thus far been found to be, it will be a powerful argument towards the restoration of the States to the position formerly held by them in the Union. They are, or have claimed to be, out of the Union. They can, if their argument is to be taken, only be readmitted as States or territories, and on this + point will be the discussion in Congress. If as ciety, will be held at the residence of A. J. Cartterritories, then their governors and other officer will be placed over them by the President, and slavery will be a subject belonging only to Congress to settle. Whatever be the solution of this question, we believe the sentiment of the North is nearly unanimous, that slavery must be controlled or abolished by Congress.

And it pursues the same course on most subjects, seldom speaking out unequivocally concerning anybody or any class, excepting only the American Missionaries. We should not have taken the trouble to notice its remarks to "whom it may concern," were not the public pretty generally " concerned" in the matter. POLYNESIAN TRAITS .- It is not often that so stirring news is received here as that from the Benefuc-Only one shore boat went off on Tuesday, that of Mr. J. R. Price, of the Fort street Market, who obtained a file of Altas to the 27th of February, with news from Washington only 14 days old. On landing, Mr. P. sought the publisher of the Commercial, intending the file for him. Not finding him, the papers, excepting one which was loaned to Col. Dryer, were sent up to Mr. Postmaster Clark's dwelling, supposing they would reach us sconest thereby. They appear to have been taken possession of by Mr. A. Potter, of the Polyntsian office, who also went to the Commissioner's and obtained the remaining one, although we had unsuccessfully solicited the favor of copying a few items from it, not knowing that the paper was brought on shore for us. Learning this fact, we procured an order for it, and after having been bluffed off by the assertion of Mr. P. that the papers were at the polace, we succeeded,

> Our printers, who by the bye, are thorough bred Union men, eager for a chance of rushing out an extra, turned out instantly and worked bravely, and at 2 o'clock in the morning, a three column extra was printed and circulated about town. They deserve the thanks of the public for the enthusiasm displayed in the effort. The Polynesian is reported to have got out a few items on a slip which it called an 'extra,' but we believe the edition was suppressed.

about 10 P. M., in finding them in Mr. Fornander's

We like a little enterprising jestling now and then in newspaper matters, its our native element; but we like to see it done honorably, and not have what belongs to us surreptitiously appropriated by rivals, as was the case on Tuesday evening, they having abstracted the papers from the Postmaster's charge, either without or with his consent, (the latter, as we judge from the Polynesian's thanks,) though as a medium for late news, the latter now arriving they were procured for and intended for the Commercial Advertiser. We send off a boat to nearly every vessel from San Francisco, and our annual boat hire exceeds $200, while we question whether the Polynesian sends a boat outside the reef once

> We have to thank the public for the interest manfested to obtain the news on Tuesday, and they would have had it that evening, but for the accident referred to. So long as we publish a paper, we mean not to be distanced by any competitors in spreading the earliest news before our readers.

Mr. Price's feat in obtaining papers from the Benefactor is not often done. The back was going along at a fearful rate-15 knots or thereabouts-under a press of canvas, everything set, studdingsails and all, and its a risky thing for a boat to approach a sunset and sunrise, and at no other time. ship's track at such a time. Capt. James ran alongside the George Lee last week in the same way, and obtained a paper or two, but generally it don't pay. Neither vessel stopped, the Polynesian's assertion to the contrary nothwithstanding.
